Dear Kostiantyn Mars:

At its October 2024 meeting, the Commission on Judicial Performance voted to close your complaints received February 28, July 18, and July 30, 2024, including your further correspondence received in July and August 2024.

After considering all the information, the commission determined that there was insufficient support for the allegations of impropriety in your complaints and that judicial misconduct could not be established by clear and convincing evidence, as is required in commission proceedings and your case has been closed.

Your July and August submissions are also considered further correspondence to complaints that you submitted concerning two different California judicial officers (which the commission voted to close in December 2023 and May 2024). Your submissions have been considered in order to determine whether there is any basis for action by this commission. It has been concluded that the contents of the letters do not provide grounds for proceeding further. Your submissions do not support a basis for finding judicial misconduct.

Very truly yours,
